Senior Class History

DO we think we're the best class that ever issued in a blaze of glory from out the portals of old M.H.S. Naturally. So has each of the other classes that have graduated. That means we've gotta prove it, doesn't it, Raffy?

Well, athletics hardly need be mentioned. Ernie Hansen, Dave Hunt and Ben Evans have starred on the grid ever since we can remember. Nor have the other sports been lacking in support from our class — basketball, lacrosse, baseball, soccer. In fact the lad first mentioned has battled for the glory of Alma Mater countless times in several of these sports, backed by an admirable array of teammates from the class of '43. And our senior year has been no exception, despite the ever-increasing number of draft questionnaires and the terrible question — "Army? . . . Navy? . . . Merchant Marine? . . . Air Corps?" — not to mention Stranny's threat to leave us and "jine up". He did, too.

There's one thing about those sky-high walls and commando tracks over in the south field. When the boys get in the army, they won't have any trouble with the mild little courses they have to run. After marching up and down through wind, rain and snow all winter on the football field, Iceland will seem like Florida . . . or something. At any rate there won't be any 4-F's from Manhasset if gymnastics can prevent it.

Dramatics! Well, Miss Gaynor's division of the eighth grade gave a performance of Hamlet on Broadway! — howzat? M.H.S. will never forget the Chinese play we gave in the ninth grade — The Lost Princess — remember the long green dragon? In the tenth grade we astounded the school with our talent in "Sugar and Spice". And what about

Georgie Porgie, where two of Manhasset's charmers battled for the love of "Mr. Cameron" (Phil Shea in a West Point uniform). That was our contribution at the tender age of juniors. This year, courtesy of Mr. Hitler and his Jap compatriots, there was no senior class play. I guess it's quality, then, rather than its counterpart that speaks for our dramatics. Anyway you will agree, after seeing our great thespians holding the mirror up to nature that the gentle art of the theater has not died yet.

So far has our fame spread that we were asked to be on the Columbia School of the Air. Some went in and the rest of the school crammed itself into the auditorium to listen and try to pick out which voice was whose.

Then there were a few hectic days just before going up to the Munsey Park Woman's Club to give book reports — slower, slower please, don't read so fast. And then all of a sudden we were standing up in front of a sea of blurry expectant faces and were expected to read to them about some books. Well, somehow, we did, too. And the refreshments afterwards were wonderful. How many cupcakes apiece? After the sixth the count began to get a little hazy.

As soon as Broadway heard that we seniors were studying American History (something entirely new, of course) they bustled around and got out a whopping good play which they called "The Patriots". Naturally after all that work for us, we had to go in and see it. So we did, and to round the day off nicely we also visited the American exhibit at the Metropolitan Museum, recalling the days when, as sixth graders, we explored the mysteries of the Egyptian wing.

Talk about dances! Hasn't Betty Lou Milliken transformed the gym into a paradise for every class-of-'43 dance there has been? Seems to me, back in the days when we were juniors we used to make paper flowers in our sleep for the junior prom. And as for the senior prom — once inside the doors, you forgot the darkened streets, the blackened windows through which no hint of gaiety could filter, and danced the night away in a kingdom of snowflakes and sparkling Christmas scenes.

Lunch ain't what it used to be, either. Comes the zero hour and we organize an armed invasion of the cafeteria to see what the hungry hordes of underclassmen have left for the last shift to eat. After downing a goodly portion of those baffling things known to science as "vitamins", we make a mad dash for the one lone car in the parking space.

This year, as the whole world turns to thoughts more serious, les belles femmes of the senior class watch and weep as our boys troop away to join the army, the navy, the marines. Good luck to you fellas! With a bunch like you in there slugging, we can't help winning the war.

Well, we may not have had a full year of English and History courses, we may not have the gasoline to drive down to Howard Johnson's after every dance, we may not have Stranny or "Pop" Brewster any more, but we do have a senior room, and we do have a Tower, so here it is, our farewell present for you to remember us by. We won't forget you, M.H.S., no matter how hard we're trying to get away now.

Junior Class History

A H! the fateful fleeting of time. It seems only yesterday that Harry, Ginny and the others were just some of the little shavers of the eighth grade. Next year they will be seniors!

Even then everyone will remember the days when Happy Rollins, who still bears the evidences of having bumped into a wall in his early childhood, Artie (ball and chain) Glenn, and Cadet Mace careened madly into the parking space "aboard" the Marmon.

Those were the good old days, gone now, but only for the duration. To take the Marmon's place is Les' car. The car is at a standstill but not the conversation: "Done your Solid? . . . We didn't have any butter either . . . Gosh! Ouiji said . . . When are the rings coming?"—with maybe a pencil or a book around to prove they really do attend school.

Come around any noon-time and you'll be sure to find John "Esquire" Goff down in the general purpose room trying his darndest to induce a few brave souls to come in and dance.

Look around town a while and you'll find the class prexy, Anita, keeping books at Bauer's, Skinny looking pretty while serving coffee at the movies and the crowd at the "Greek's" hashing over the problem of the recreation center. 'Twas through their interest that the problem was at last recognized. It might be said, however, that it probably would never have received attention if it had not been for their class sponsor, Mr. Barham.

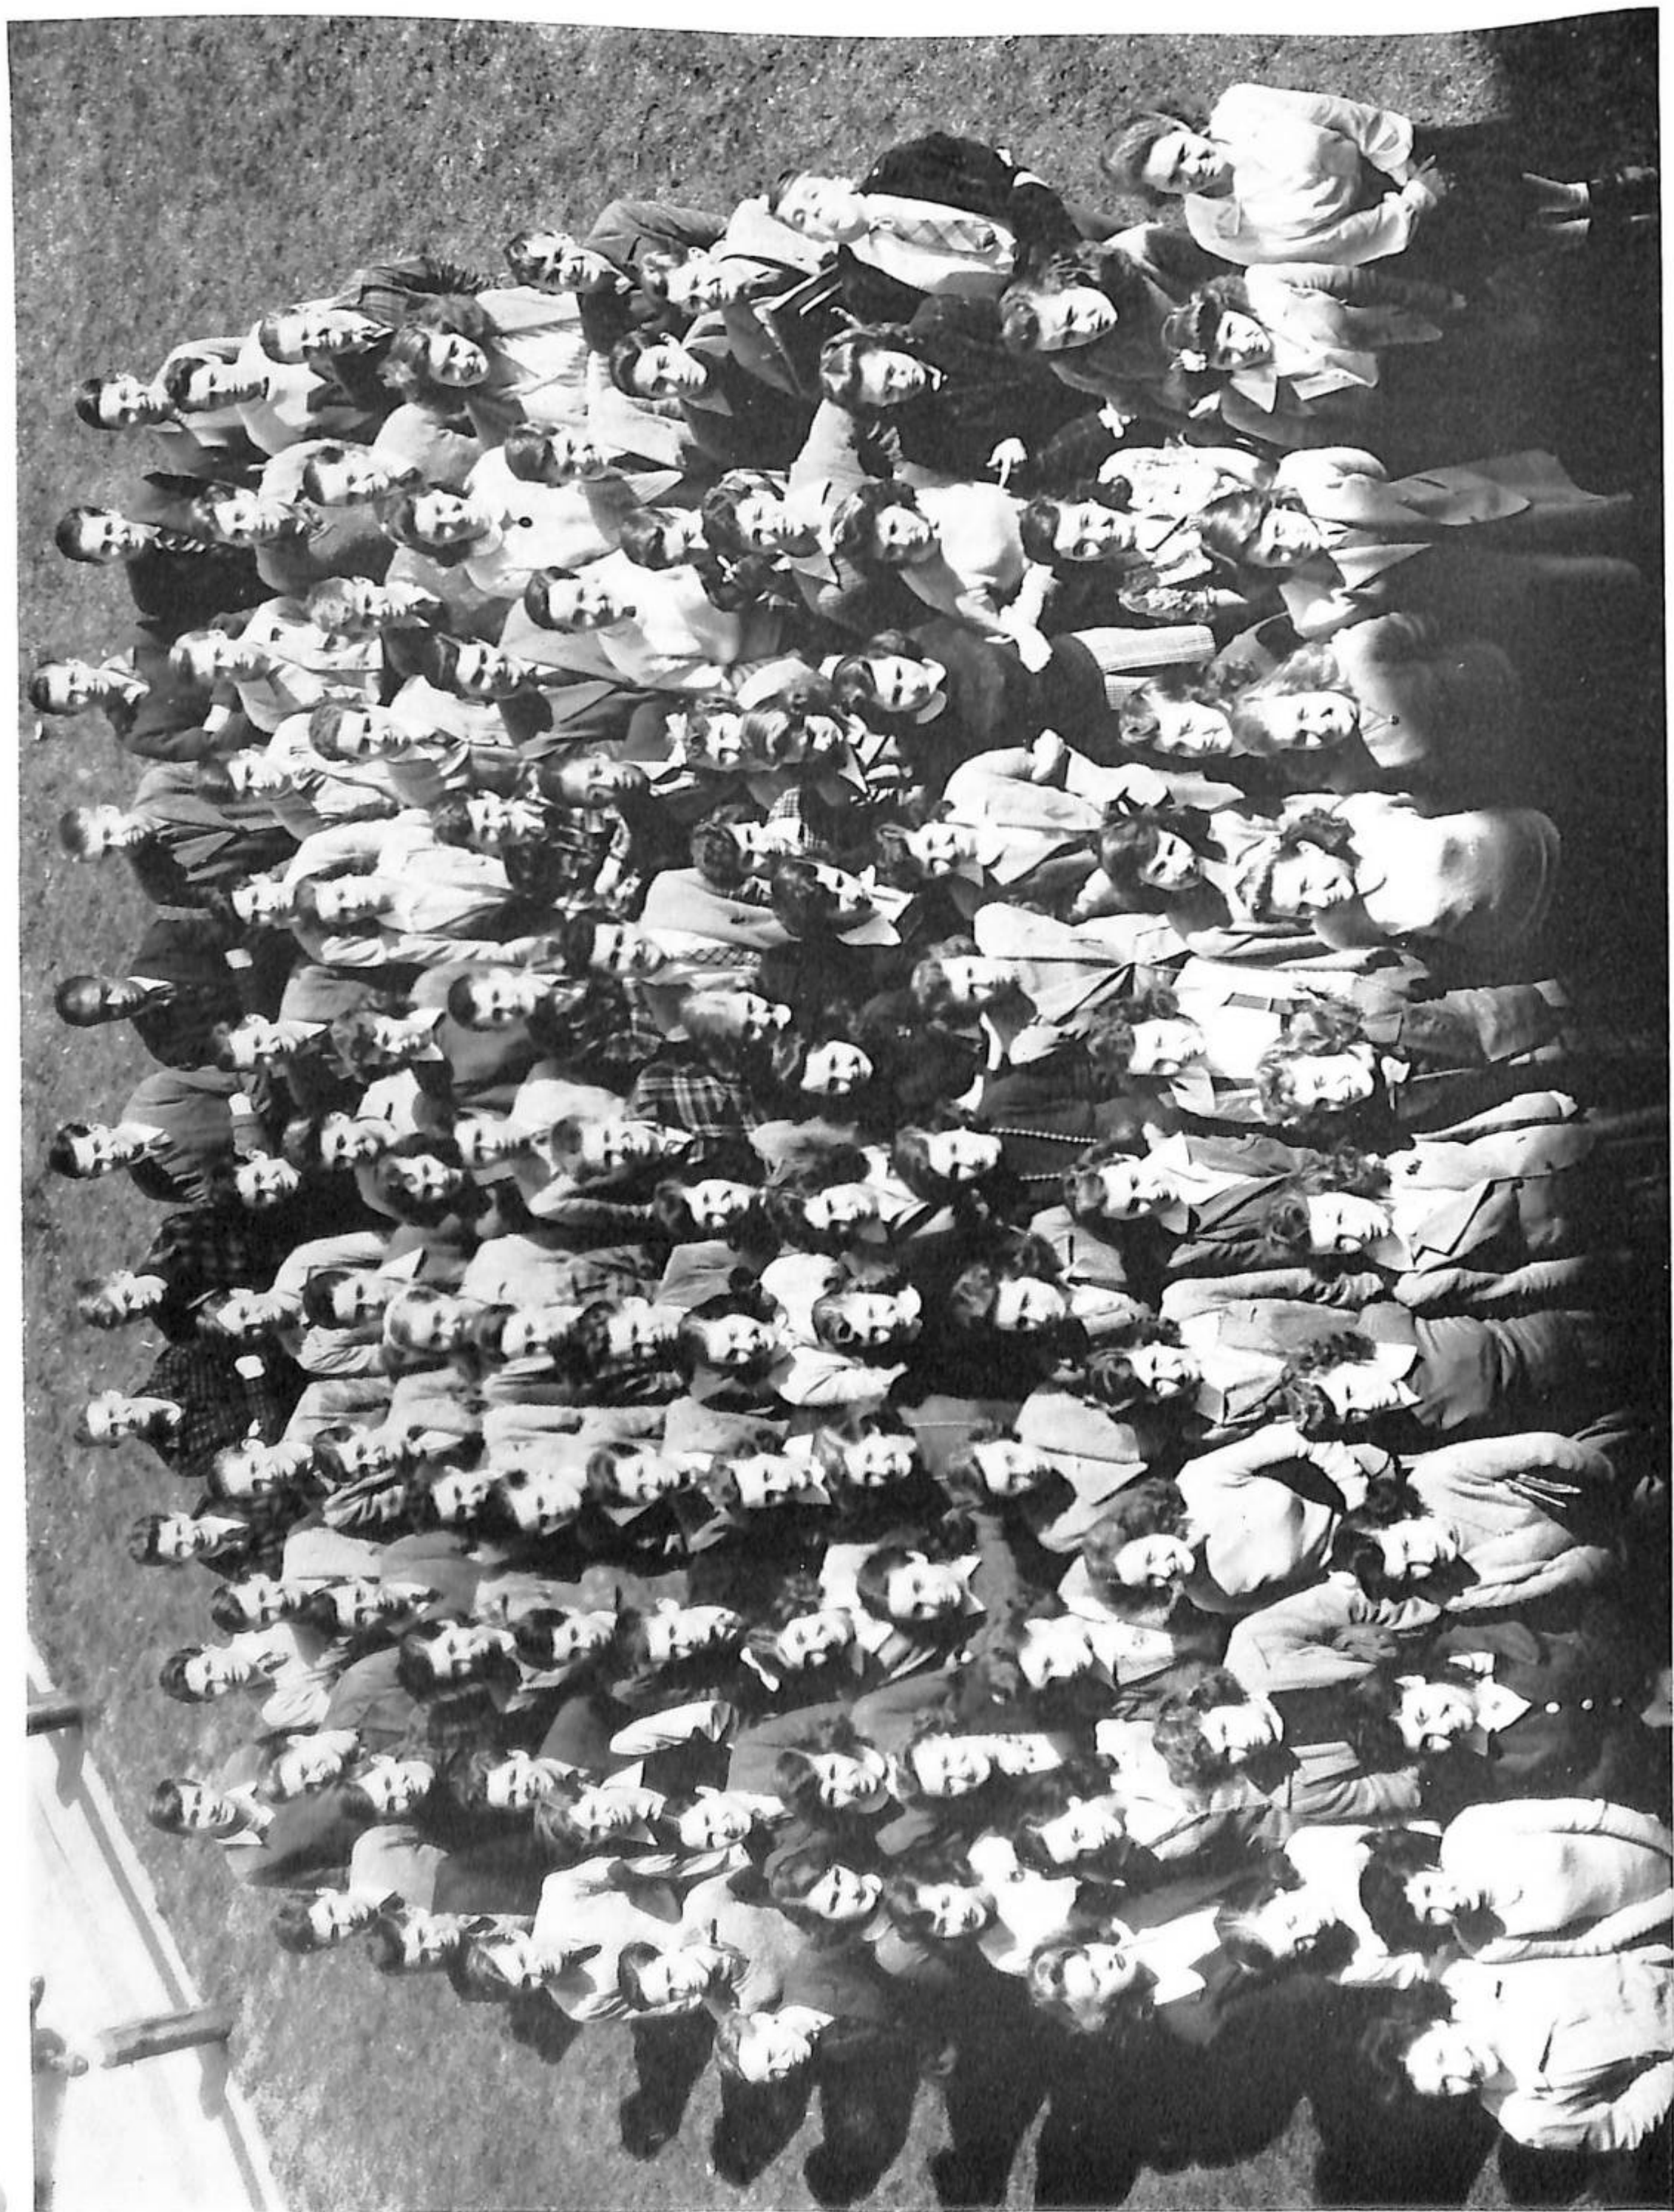

Mac and Sweeney, the small huskies of the class shine at varsity football, and several others excell at basketball. Speaking of sports, we must not forget how the junior cheerleaders worked this year.

Bibs and Babs proved that there is beauty as well as brains in the junior class when they glided across the stage in the fashion show, last December. Bibs in her blue dress with self-ruffles and Babs sporting a green suit and bright red accessories.

But alas! One day in February we missed the black and gray Pontiac which came flying up to school every day at 16½ minutes to 9. Augie, along with John Schmitz and Pat Kelly, now pace the halls at Dwight.

The fact that the Juniors have 3 members on the G.O. Council, Helen, Bob, and Mac, is proof in itself that there is leadership and initiative in the junior class.

Sophomore Class History

THOUGH too young to enlist in the armed forces, the Sophomore class has pitched in to the war effort at M.H.S. with gusto.

For example, the M.H.S. Salvage Committee is directed by sophomores. They have had successes in tin-can, silk-stockings, old-paper and rag collecting.

This year's Soph Hop was a raging success, but there was a strange note in the air, and it didn't come from Scotty Warner's orchestra. This strangeness was caused by the gym interior. In keeping with the times, the Sophs patriotically passed up lavish decorations. Expenses were kept at a minimum.

In gym, the Sophomore boys have organized a "leaders club" whose members meet with Mr. Stewart after school several times a week. They are preparing themselves to act as leaders of their fellow students so that a more varied and interesting physical fitness program may be carried on.

In boys sports, it has been noted that on the average, fifty per cent of all candidates for lacrosse, baseball, basketball, and football have been Sophomore boys.

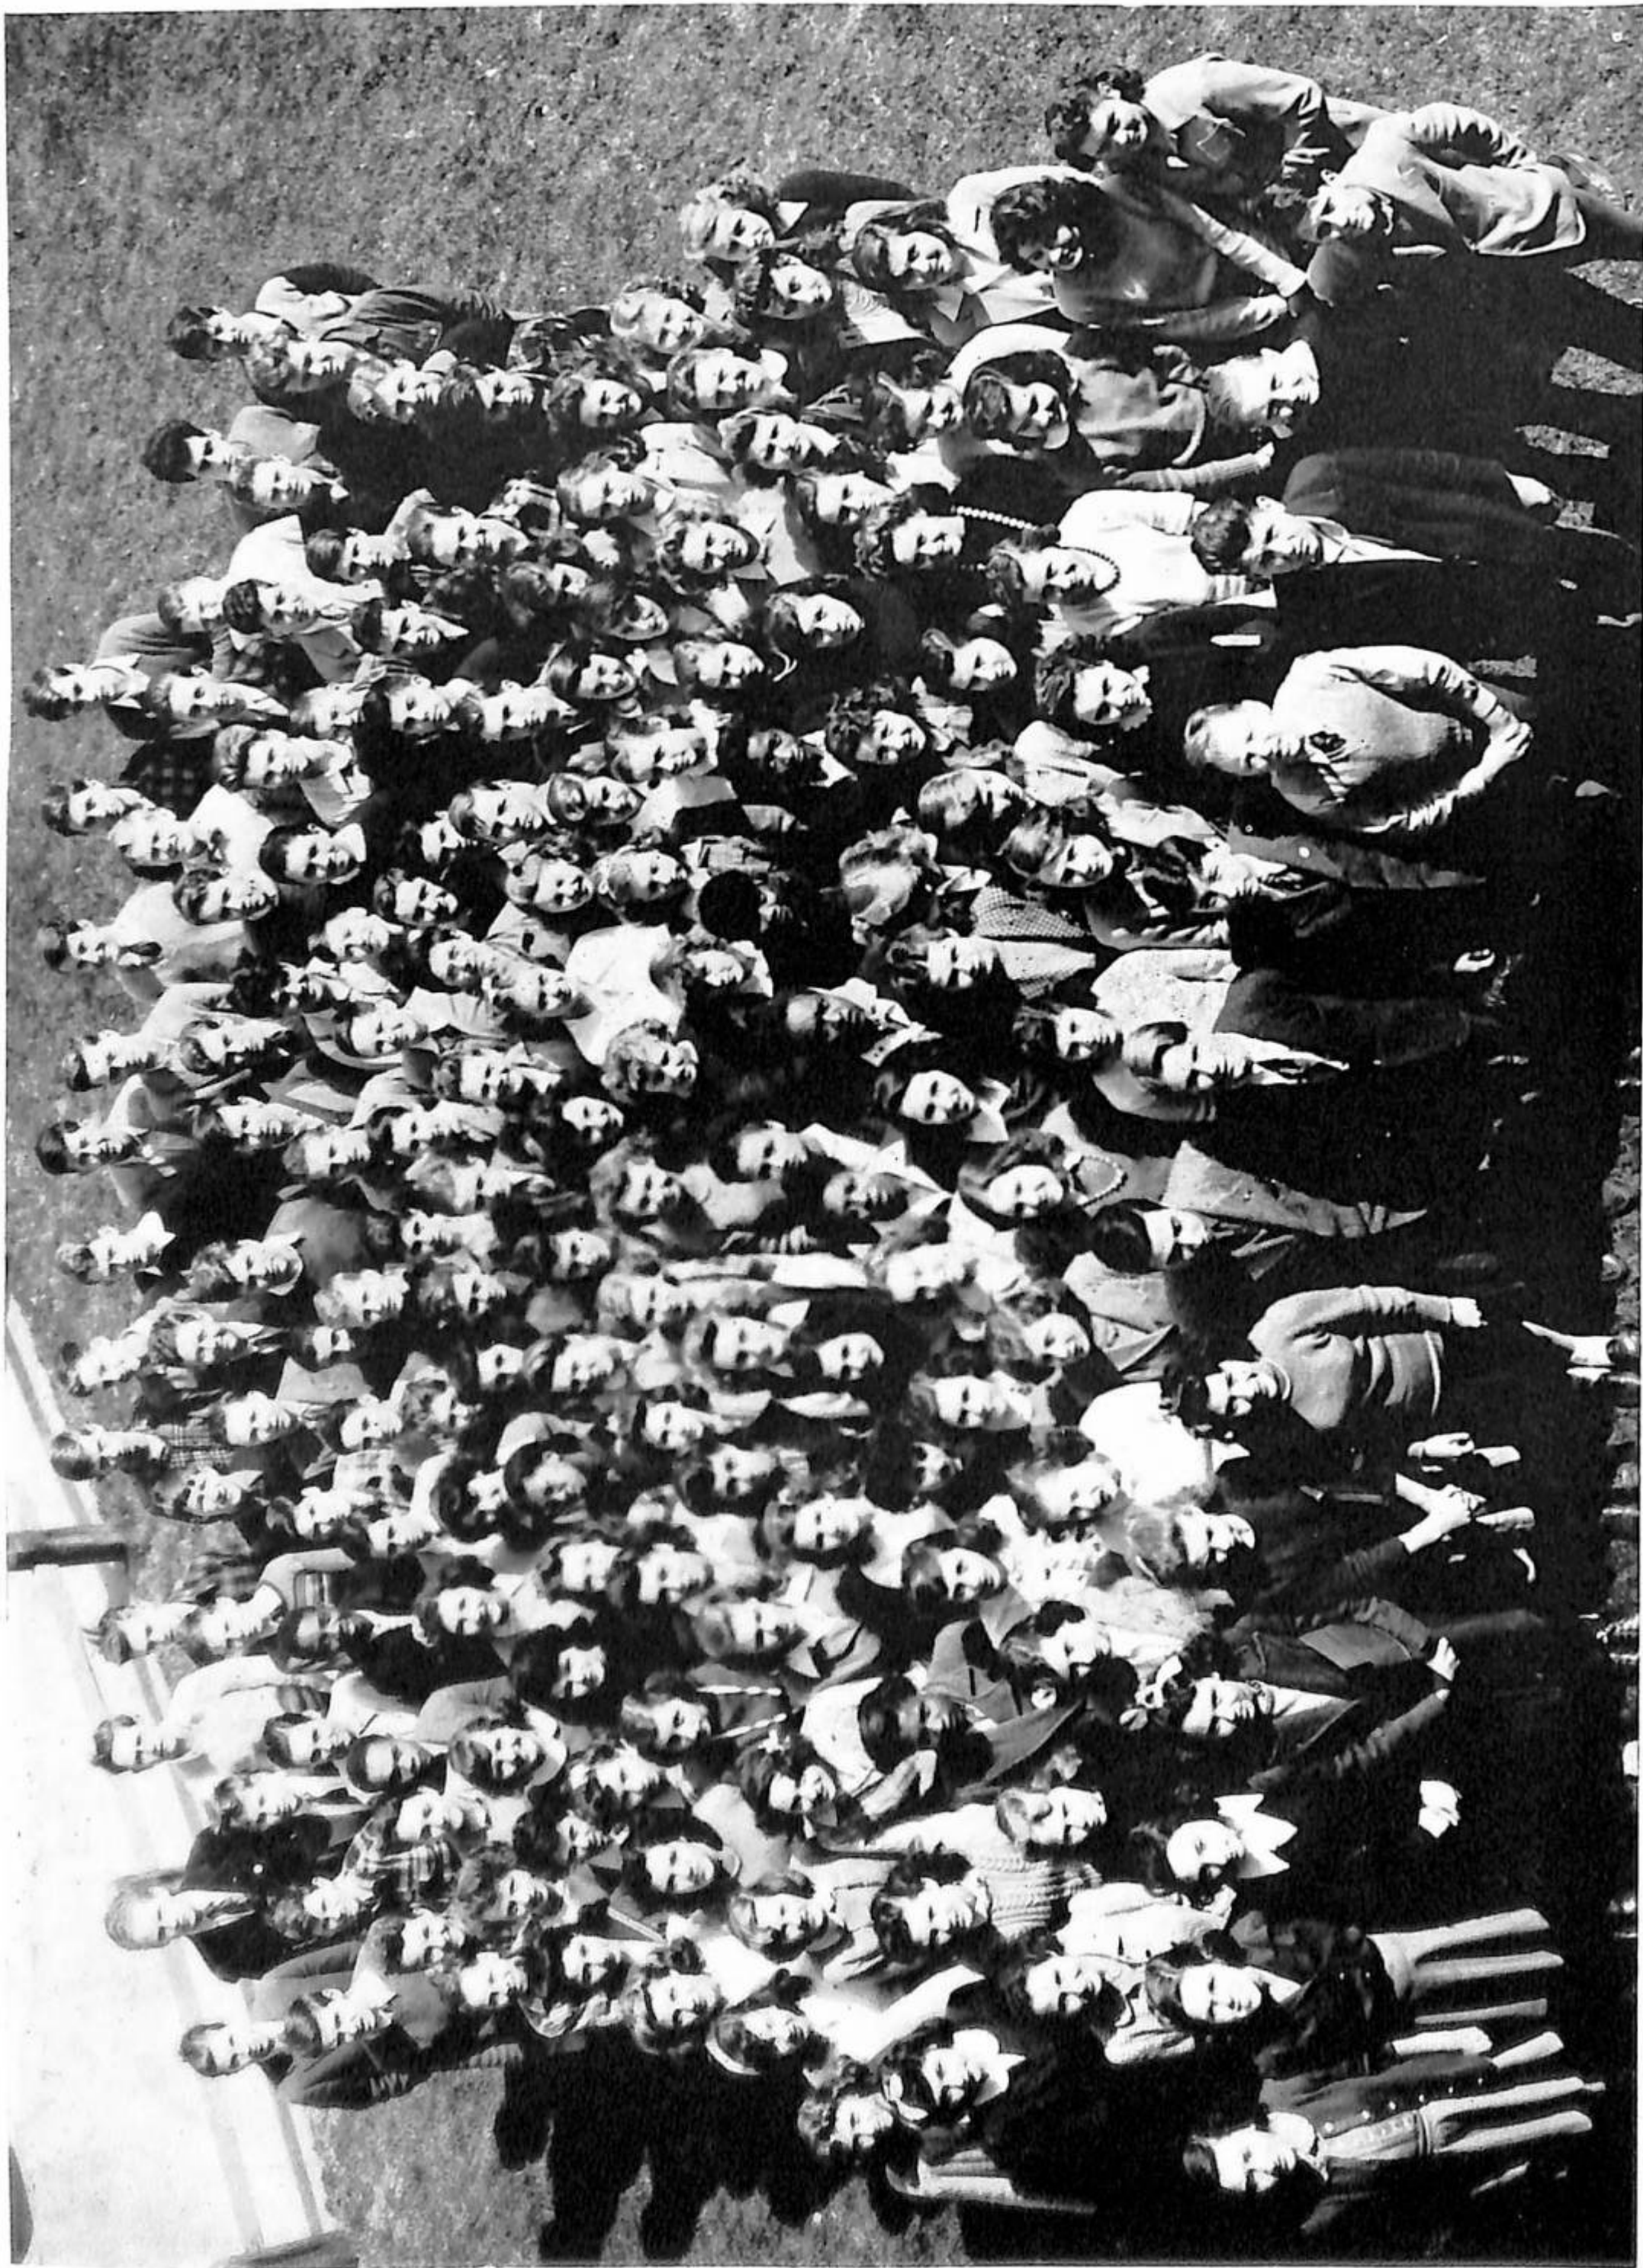

In girls sports, no one questions the supremacy of the Soph girls. Besides doing a creditable job on Sports Day, they accomplished the legendary impossible: they defeated not only the freshmen and junior teams, in their annual volleyball tournament, but also the lordly seniors.

In assemblies the Sophs have presented two memorable performances. Larry Kelly and Doris Steigman (remember?) were starred in "The Breakfast Tray". Another seasoned performer is Barry Morrell, a tenor in the choir. His concert rendition of "Ave Maria" was excellent.

The class organized a trip to "The Eve of St. Mark", Maxwell Anderson's Broadway success. This was reaching high for sophomores, but they claim that they understood and enjoyed it.

The spirit and enthusiasm of this class of '45 did not "peter out" with time. As a crowning achievement on their Sophomore year, they organized a Victory Garden. While they cannot waste tomatoes on Hitler and Mussolini, they can add to the nations food supply, and help to defeat the enemies of freedom!

Freshman Class History

THERE'S no denyin' that dancing is one of the best known talents of the freshmen. (Do you dig my jive?) They like nothing better than to grab their cuddle-bunnies and head for the nearest jam session. Why, twirl ma' turban, when Buckie Walker starts makin' with the music, the upperclassmen give these hepcats plenty of room! They demonstrated their zoot rug-cutting at the Frosh Hop, and although the sponsors admit the profit was only forty-eight cents, everyone said the dance rated but so-lid. And sure 'nuf, Jackson, the ninth grade noonday dancing has an excellent turnout of both jitterbugs and "snails".

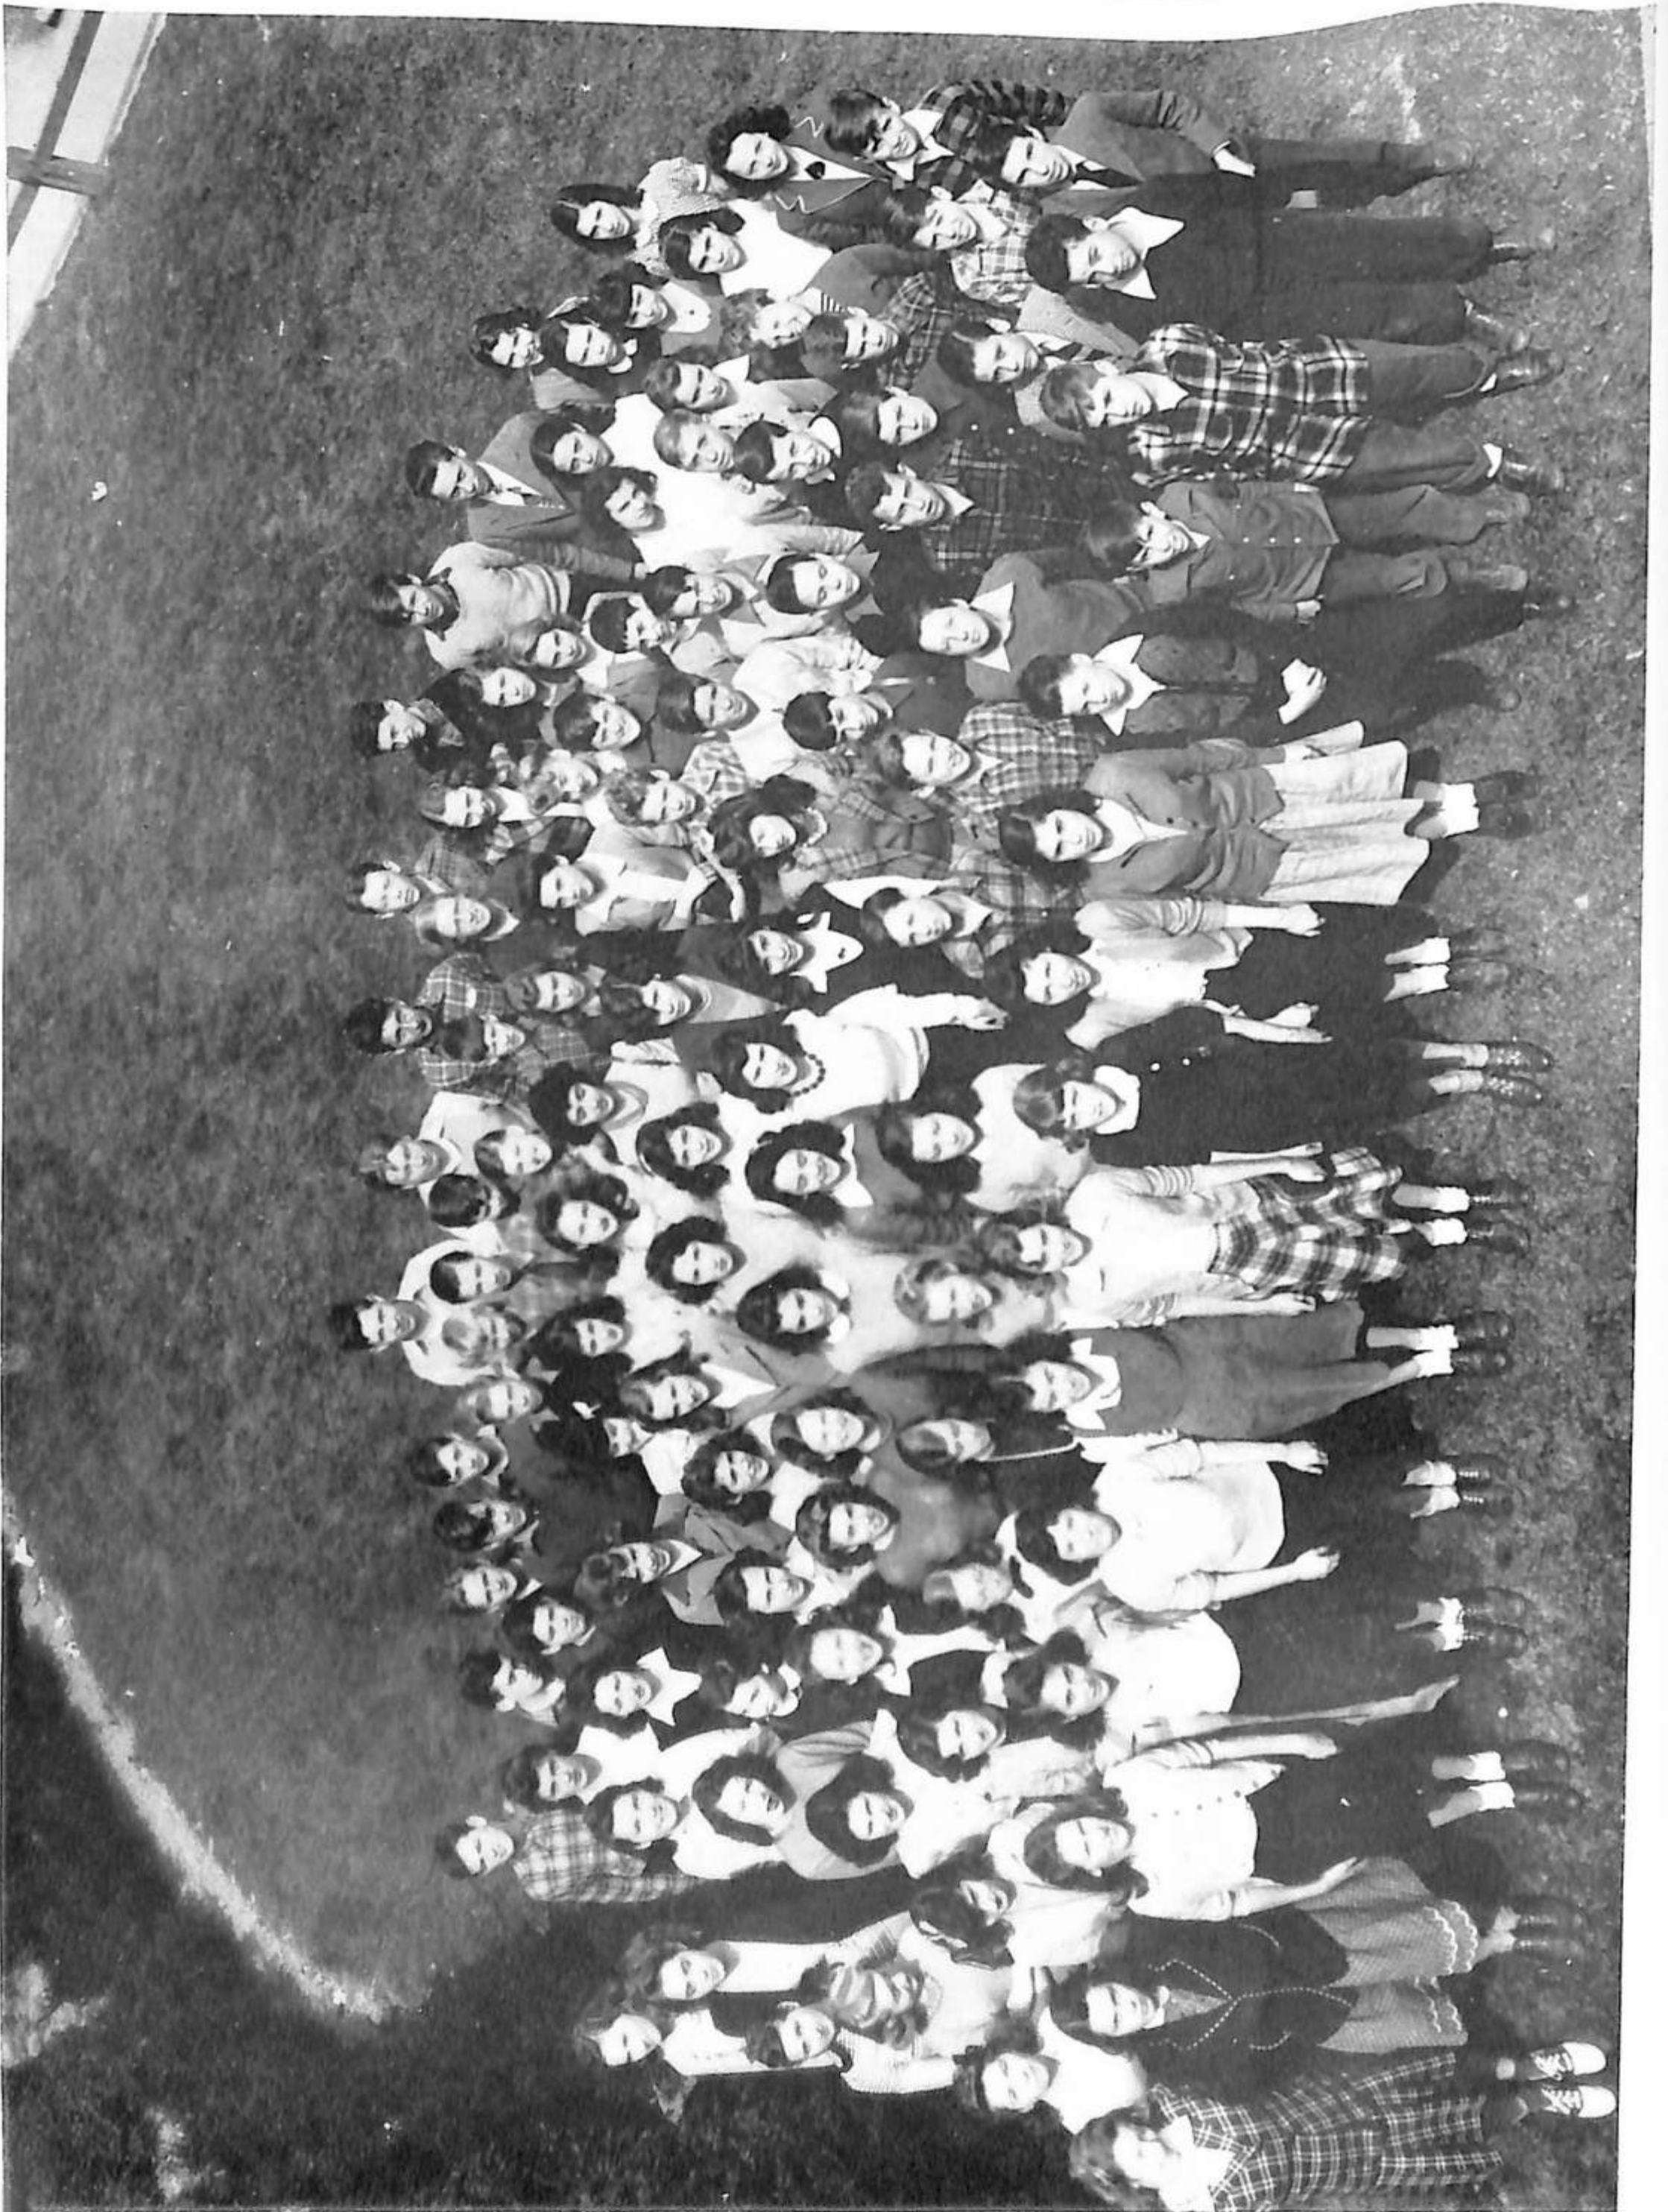

But dancing is just a part of the '46 history. We can't overlook the class constitution which Bill Haugaard, Arthur Pitt and President Dick Hunter made, or the freshman student council, which was set up to plan dances, outings, and aids to the war effort. Such steps of organization so early in their high school career clearly show the initiative of these freshmen.

Looking back over this year, perhaps they will remember the heated debates in Miss Hanf's room during the Wednesday afternoon church periods when such questions came up as where the freshmen boys could take their dates, and how the student government could be managed. Or they may remember the camera fiends roaming around snapping pictures left and right, the homeroom Christmas parties, the trips to the town hall, the educational movies, Vita Pisciotto's beautiful voice, and perhaps even rubbing elbows with the juniors and seniors, who turned out to be quite friendly and down to earth.

In the sports department, the class of '46 is off to a flying start. Barbara Boos, Lucy Marsh, Dot Truman and "Chickie" Schulhof are a few of the Amazons who kept the freshmen girls in the limelight. As for six-man football, a team with a freshman captain, Bill Martin, won the intra-mural contest. At lacrosse practice, at least fifteen ninth grade boys are working diligently, several showing great promise.

It could easily be said that the whole class shows great promise, for they have enough good sense to balance their lighter moods. When they become seniors such words as convoy, Messerschmidt, air-raid, Axis and sniper may be just memories. But no matter what situation develops, we know this class will always try to make the best of it.

EIGHT GRADE OFFICERS

Eighth Grade History

SIXTEEN minutes to nine! Timid upperclassmen clear the stairways. Here comes the eighth grade horde, trampling the poor unfortunates who happen to be in their path. On the lower floor, lockers swing miraculously open at the touch of their owners' hands or feet without benefit of combinations. Lockers slam again and the horde vanishes behind the classroom doors as quickly as it arrived.

Behind these doors, they battle conscientiously with the 3 R's, plus social studies and English, sometimes enlivened by a secret game of "Tic Tac Toe" or "Penny Ante". After several enlightening hours these sub-freshmen again emerge and speed toward the cafeteria. Here they engage in vigorous arguments about who's where in line and why.

Then back again to the classrooms they go but as soon as classes are over they gather to discuss such events as the Soph Hop and who took whom. They might even discuss the crime wave which took place in Miss Colden's room. Figures with ominously bulging pockets were observed tip-toeing around the room. Muffled exclamations of "Stick 'em up!" and "Ow, they got me!" were heard from all corners. The conflict grew; the situation became acute. Finally the law, in the form of Miss Colden, intervened. The murderous weapons—water guns, to be exact—were confiscated and law and order reigned once more.

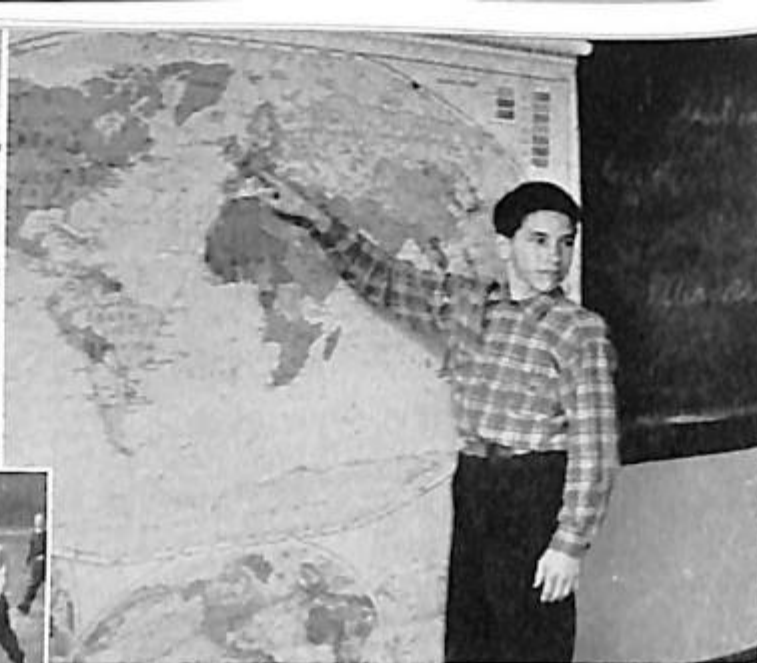

They might talk about the epidemic of dandruff that plagued the girls in the Home Ec class. Fortunately the "dandruff" turned out to be soap chips which came in an unexplained downpour of Super Suds during the absence of Miss DeMeo.

So goes the day of the eighth-grader. But their school life is not without its social side. One class saw "Gone With the Wind" for information on the Civil War. Miss Teel's lucky class saw both "Life With Father" and "Janie."

As extra-curricular activities, the eighth-graders participated in all the school sports while the more artistic members of the class labored on a class mural based on American History.

Perhaps the upperclassmen have decided that the eighth-graders are a race of jitter-bugs and scatterbrains, hurrying and scurrying through the halls with no regard for life or limb. Well, maybe they do have their heads in the clouds, but their feet are planted firmly on the ground.
